Adriano Paganini is at it again.

His restaurant group, which is behind San Francisco spots Beretta, Lolinda, Delarosa, Starbelly, El Techo, Uno Dos Tacos and the popular burger chain Super Duper, announced today that it will add the former Cafe des Amis spot to its restaurant portfolio.

There aren't any details on a name or menu concept yet, but Paganini said that his new concept, landing at 2000 Union Street, "will offer something distinctly fresh to Cow Hollow and the Marina, while encompassing the energy of the neighborhood."

Paganini said the concept will be in line with the philosophy of his other restaurants – "special and exciting, yet unpretentious."

"We look forward to serving as a gathering spot for quality food and good drinks for the entire neighborhood," Paganini said.
